Alright, we're here live at WWDC07 for yet another Jobsnote! Looks like things are about to get rolling soon, stay tuned for minute-by-minute updates.

Rocket fuel for your apps? We always thought the optimal fuel mixture was a ton of RAM + way too many MHz + fast drives.

What could it be? Remember, they did this exact same veiled banner last year (it wound up being the Mac Pro).

8:45AM PST - We're just hanging in line, watch our legs cramp up as the media trickles in. This is a 4,000-5,000 person event, so please say a little prayer we aren't trampled by Mac fanboys as they open the gates.

9:03AM - Plenty of media have rolled in -- everybody still looks bleary eyed; we see lots of huge lenses and ready laptops. Seems like every time we come out more and more join us in liveblogging!

They need update the iMac badley but this is WWDC and the iMac is a Consumer model so I jut don't see it happening. Time will tell.
Richard Flood @ Jun 11th 2007 12:07PM	Highly Ranked
I wish people would stop saying that! So what the developers, have the whole week there. Apple knows how many people form the industry watch this event, the WWDC keynote is a perfect place/stage from which to launch a new product and get it noticed.
Picky @ Jun 11th 2007 12:26PM	Neutral
I hope they update the Mac mini. I've been waiting for that so that I can replace an aging PC that is on the brink of death.
Robert @ Jun 11th 2007 12:36PM	Highest Ranked
Perhaps, but Apple has no trouble getting attention. Quite the opposite really.
I think no new iMac until there's an OS to back it up. Sure it's long in the tooth, but at this point releasing it would at best be new features, pending a new OS. A high resolution display that you can't use in some fresh plastic.
Buds @ Jun 11th 2007 1:02PM	Neutral
Picky... the mac mini is no more. They are discontinuing the line. Where have you been for the past month???

Well we are also due for an update to the Xserve RAID with SATA drives and this would be an ideal time for it
- Reply
- Peter Tripp @ Jun 11th 2007 12:10PM Highest Ranked
Totally. I'm glad to see I'm not the only one who thinks this will be happening. XServe RAID is the only product in apple's lineup that doesn't support SATA (even iMac and Mac Mini have it). We might even get lucky and get the same SAS/SATA dual-backplane that the xserves have. There was even a SATA prototype back in Jan. So apple, where's the sata love?

And while I'm making unfounded predictions, I'd also put my money on: iMacs, MacBook Pro Mini. At for the 100:1 odds, iPhone control of your AppleTV.

Under that veil is the new iMac! It just has to make sense. They announce new features to leopard today and release it for final testing. One feature being multi-touch (with fingers crossed). Then they release the multi-touch iMac so our valued developers have something to work with.
I just hope they're not metallic. That would take away from the Mac Pro's glory.
